The minor in anthropology with an emphasis on archaeology introduces students to the scientific study of material remains of past peoples and cultures. The minor requires 15 credit hours in anthropology. Students must take ANT 2201 and ANT 3401 and at least two other Archaeology courses. The remaining credit hours may consist of an anthropology course from any subfield (archaeology, cultural or biological) provided it is approved by the undergraduate faculty advisor in the Department of Anthropology. For further information about the minor program, contact the Department of Anthropology Advisor, Cameron Beason.
